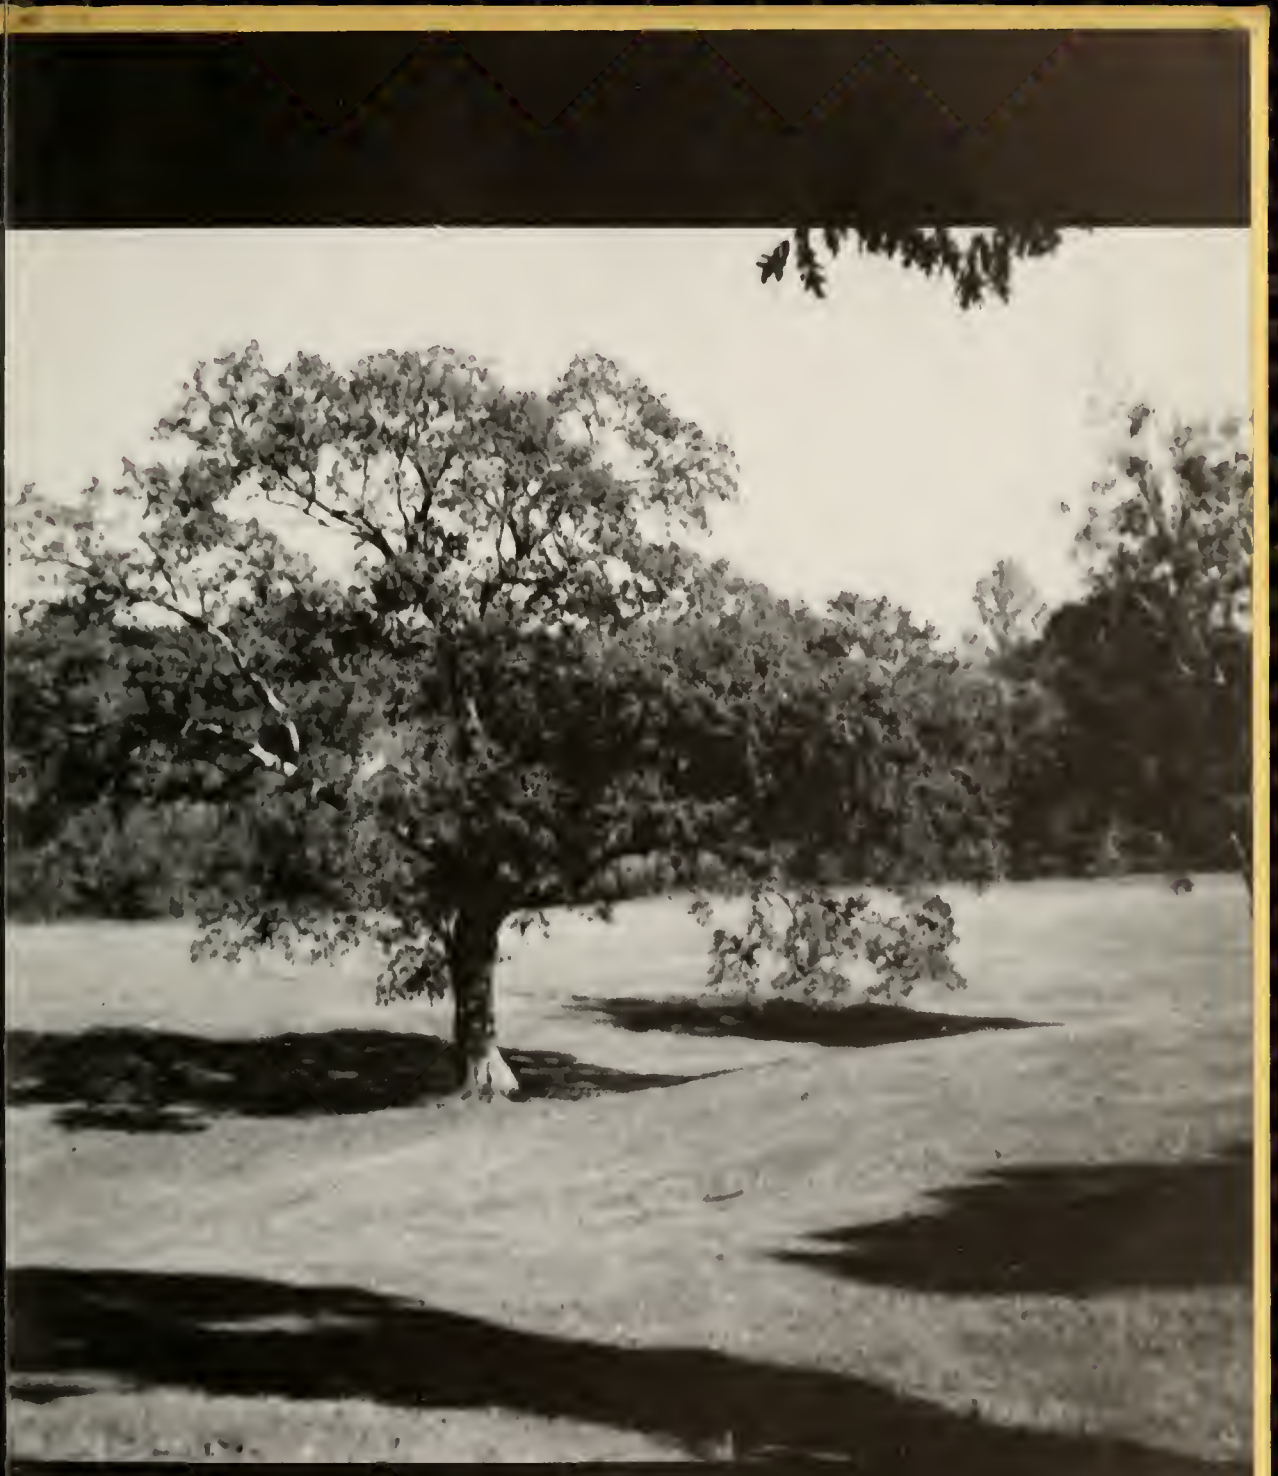
white matter



friendship is a sheltering tree . . .

home away from home?

north carolina

baptist hospital

some friends are made by nature, some by contract, some by interest, and some by souls.
— taylor

friends together gained knowledge and understanding to keep forever.

the road i took was named good-bye the path looked strange, i wonder why it left familiar things behind a hand caught mine . . . i paid no mind the stranger never once did say just what had brought him on my way.

on we went, and some afraid i wished i hadn't come, but stayed all the friends that once i knew took a road named good-bye too there were no two roads the same though all were called good-bye by name the road went on; we went on too and i was sad, for then i knew that never could i be the same having walked down good-bye lane and though i couldn't understand we walked hand in hand.

we said no words, but just walked on i thought of things now past and gone i thought of games i'd lost and won, i thought of all the things i'd done i thought of those i'd loved and cared of times we'd had of things we'd shared.

i thought of those i'd come to know; just knowing them — they've helped me so, i thought of things, of tears i'd shed . . . those same things now brought smiles instead the tasks i'd done, those left to do — i wondered how i'd make it through.

when something inside seems to say,
"the best you can from day to day" the way was rough; i knew the score, it never ends . . . there's always more:
but now i know that all in all each thing in its own place will fall.

i thought of all the happy days, the sad ones just seem a haze and in a flash i came to see how much the past had meant to me we walked along — i wondered where the future led and what was there.

the past still echoed from behind i was its, and it was mine but in my heart was still a fear, and in my eye a shinning tear yet on my face there was a smile, and we walked forward all the while.

i walked along the road goody-bye i looked back once . . . i heaved a sigh then i remembered at my side my silent, but my constant guide the stranger's hand i felt in mine i looked into his face this time. i asked him his name — he turned just so he smiled and said, "i'm called hello."

. . . dedication 1974

the 1974 yearbook staff in cooperation with the 1974 graduating class from the north carolina baptist school of nursing hereby dedicates this edition of the white matter to:

north carolina baptist hospital school of nursing, a school which will forever be remembered for the outstanding caliber of nurses it has graduated from its doors in the last fifty-one years. excellence is theirs.

carolyn ashburn, a former student and graduate of the school who has helped lead us to the heights of excellence and perfection, for which the school had long been noted. teaching infused with love and caring has made her someone who will always stand first in the hearts of those of us who have come to know her.

and to the final graduating class of ncbh school of nursing. they carry with them the distinction of being the final class and with it a challenge to continue to strive for and uphold the standards of nursing excellence that have been demonstrated by the many who preceded them.

you ask me what
i am
i am an individual . . .
and yet i am
many things.
i am made up of many different people . . .
i am a part of everything . . . and everything is a part of me.
i am
the brotherhood
and freedom
which struggle.
to shape this generation . . . and
i am
very proud to live in a world where people are trying to live
side by side.

i am a friend
to many . . . and i know they have helped me
thus far . . .
and i hope
my hand has been available
when they needed
someone to reach out to.

i live from day to day
and yet
those days must turn to years —
as they have done.

i have good times
and i have bad times
but i realize that these times
will soon
be memories
i will be a memory . . .

when i look at my world
i cannot say
i see a completely beautiful
mother earth . . .
because i see
pollution and wars
and starving people . . .
but in the midst of all this,
i see flowers
and trees
and friends . . .
and i know
i have a lot to live for . . .

when i think of the whole universe
i see how small
i am . . .
i see a child playing in life; secure
in mama's arms . . .
i see an adult
trying to find tomorrow —
and not really knowing where tomorrow is . . .

sometimes
i wish i could remain
a child
forever . . .
in my heart
i know that i have to play my part in the never — ending
role of life . . .
and since
i am
a part of life
i should do my best to make this world
a better place.
i am
a human being first
a nurse,
second.

more than just a hospital...

North Carolina Baptist Hospital is more than just a hospital. It is part of an Academic Medical Center, one of only 113 in the nation.

The core of an academic medical center is a major teaching hospital, like Baptist, and a medical school, like Bowman Gray. Together they operate programs designed to:

— Provide the best of health care for the patients referred to its hospital.

— Train physicians, medical scientists, nurses, and other allied health personnel to serve the health needs of society.

— Produce scientific knowledge, resulting in the continuing improvement of health care.

Because of its teaching and research programs, an academic medical center has facilities and specialists not normally found in a community hospital.

— Facilities like a department of nuclear medicine where painless "scans" of vital organs reveal data of great value to the proper diagnosis of disease.

— Or a radiopharmacy laboratory where isotopes are custom made to do just the job ordered by the Baptist Hospital specialist in charge of your care.

— People like a neonatologist who is trained to deal with problems which may occur during the critical first 28 days of an infant's life.

— Or a thoracic surgeon who has the knowledge and skills to perform open-heart surgery.

Almost every community in North Carolina now has health care facilities in or near it capable of meeting most of the health needs of its citizens. In fact, 95 per cent of all medical care in this state is delivered by physicians in health care facilities outside an academic medical center.

However, when there is need for the specialized health care available only in such a center, North Carolina Baptist Hospital is ready to serve.
